A New America, An Awakened Future on Our Horizon

How to use this book:

Use this book for informal discussion groups, seminars, formal classroom use. It can serve as core or supplementary material. Draw upon its extensive bibliography. Suitable for high school to college and post graduate level – social sciences, communications, media and creative culture, English, American Studies, political science, statistics, anthropology, history, consciousness and religious studies, community development, personal development, and much more.

Spirituality and religion. Civil society and spirituality. Discernment with Compassion. These are important concepts and stumbling blocks for many. See how the research and intuitive material in this book shows ways to use these for positive personal and social change.

Look at pp 226-7 – a synthesis of the major typological systems is graphically presented here Find ways to apply “Connection-Service-Spirituality (see Chapter 11) in your work. These embrace some of the simplest elements for communications – interpersonal, group/organizational, or mass society. Also see 4-page bulletin on this at link:

Take the 5-minute “What Type Am I” profiles (chapter 5). These do not pigeonhole like other popular typing systems. Rather, these are fluid tendencies based on stable core values. See pp226-7 for a graphical portrayal of the center of gravity for each of The 8 Types as well as the fluid overlap blending that occurs at their edges. Use the typological test on yourself, your groups, your society-wide programs. Note that if you score within one or two points, examine those questions that you might have answered slightly differently. Perhaps you are a natural “bridge” between types. “Bridge people” are important in developing coherent connected community among diverse tendencies.

Consider how can you use the principles and concepts described in Decade of the Heart (chapter 12) to help build new community where you are? Also see separate article on this topic link:

<http://www.pfcn.net/Bulletins/New%20Community%20-%20New%20Leaders.pdf>

Consider ways for political or social campaigns can use the material – not only the Connection-Service-Spirituality model but the more detailed ones as well.
